This affects a very small percentage (approximately 1.6%) of the US population. Yet it will cause a large amount of money to change all the paperwork that's already been done and the paperwork that will need to be done in the future.

This will also cause great confusion, require more security agents and add time when someone wants to use a passport that states they're one gender when they LOOK like they're a different gender.

Lastly, I don't see a problem here that needs to be fixed, I'm only seeing a lot of time and money needlessly wasted.
