While I understand the alignment with the president's designation for two genders, that designation by executive order has not been vetted by a congressional vote and to make these types of changes that impact those who have transitioned seems to be changing rules that they had come to rely on. I do not see how the government should be legislating their version of morality on the population that has differing life experiences and beliefs. The founding fathers wrote our establishing documents to support individual freedoms and that the government should be supporting all to have the ability to life, liberty and the pursuit of their happiness. This seems contrarian to that rule of law and moves us back to a king who wanted to apply taxation without representation.
