

Author Full Name : Zain Padamsee

Received Date : 03/21/2025 02:06 AM

Comments Received :

Biological sex at birth is irrelevant to the passport and to identifying whether someone is a man or a woman; the passport should include current sex. This can be different from sex at birth. Additionally, there should probably be a marker other than M and F for intersex individuals, even though this is rare.