I believe that we should cease the proposed limitations on student performance tracking. Data is good. Data guides decisions. There is no reason to handcuff ourselves. We cannot improve what we cannot measure. Even if we are satisfied with our country's current levels of educational attainment, we risk the ability to stay ahead of future trends by choosing to fly blind.

I support the original November 2024 proposal that would restore reporting of student counts in each performance category for reading and math. This level of detail is critical for researchers, educators, and policymakers committed to strengthening academic outcomes nationwide.

Thank you.
