I object to the proposed removal of gender identity and sexual orientation amongst a list of protected bases on EEO Complaint Forms. Firstly, these attributes are protected bases under the Title VII laws. The removal of these bases suggests otherwise, and creates a cooling effect on individuals who are lawfully able to bring claims of employment discrimination and harassment in the workplace on the Title VII statute and the basis of sex. This attempt to erase transgender and non-binary individuals as well as lesbian, gay, bisexual and queer people in general is an action intended create a new discriminatory practices within the practice of adjudicating discrimination. The change is discrimination in practice.
