General Comment

I wanted to take a moment to thank you for taking this step to keep American families united. Thank God it has taken a great load off my back.

I think that this is a great proposal overall; however, I think that there could be a little more added to avoid further frustration on our families.

First due to the rising crimes in Latin America, I think the interviews should be held within the United States. Personally, I would not mind paying an extra fine for this as it would be more expensive to travel. At least please consider that medical examinations before the interviews be taken within the United States. I think this will also speed the process quite a bit.

Second, it would great if there could be area where we can check the status of the waiver online in addition to a turnaround estimated time that a response will be received.

Third, a very detail list of what USCIS expects to receive with the waiver would be of great help. This will help families gather the necessary information to avoid delays and denials.

Thank for considering my comment in this proposal that I hope will take effect very soon.
