

As a member of the Collaboration of Partners which assisted in the development of the proposed new USGC Recreational Boating Survey, I strongly recommend it's adoption. The information that this survey will gather is important and necessary for the USGC to fulfill its mission of improving boating safety on U.S. waters. The survey will also retrieve information that will enable the marine industry to escalate its focus on safety and customer preferences. Both the process by which the survey was developed and the one by which it would be administered have the full support of the marine industry. This is imparatnt work that needs to be done.

Respectfully,
