When you suggest registering the "device" do you mean the device or box that connects to the vehicle?.....not the MDT (mobile data terminal) which could be a tablet or smart phone right? Because if every smartphone or tablet had to be registered it would be a never ending process as models are changed frequently. Also, who ultimately is responsible for the registration? Manufacturer, application provider, or in come cases wireless carrier selling the solution? And how can the devices be registered as compliant if the details of compliancy are still not public?
