General Comment

i can understand regulating warnings on packages. i can see it is staturoily mandated. however, you can also mandate it as correct one time and then you should have in place that it cannot be changed once approved by you. so why are you trying to do this every year and spend tax dollars on it over and over and over. once you approve the warning for a company, that s it. its fixed forever. then you dont have to do it next year. i cant understand teh stupid system you seem to have set up to keep yourself constantly checking the same thing every year. why wouldl you do that stupid thing and waste our tax dollars?

we need to keep the spendign down. we need to downsize. the taxpayers of this country have been very very generous with this tobacco maelstrom, spending trillions of dollars for the last 50 years on this nonsense. we also need to hire people who can figure out ways to keep down the spending. obviously none of you have done that.

cut the budget on this program by 70%. we need downsized govt. the out of control spending is offensive and is bankrupting taxpayers of america.
