Comment: Amendment to my previous general comment.... General Comments
Overall the reporting requirements on the PIRL are invasive and burdensome for states. The reporting requirements are not sustainable if WIOA continues to suffer severe program funding cuts. The amended DOL ONLY PIRL has 520 elements. This is an inordinate amount of data that is being required from each state and many of those receiving services are receiving career services. Each state invests significant efforts to capture and report all of this data each quarter. Reducing the reporting burden and focusing on outcomes would allow states to refocus funding they are currently spending on reporting requirements for innovative efforts that benefit the workforce. Many of these reporting requirements should be scrutinized to determine the value they add to the development of the U.S. workforce. *
