To whom it may concern,

It is my understanding that Marriage and Disability questions are under consideration for omission from future ACS editions. As a researcher, professional counselor, and policy maker I contend that the data derived from these questions each year is invaluable to the well-being of our society. This data helps us to comprehend the conditions of marriage and disability among individuals, regions, and the nation. Results from the ACS translates to policies and practices that improves lives. I ask that my professional opinion be considered in deliberation on this action.

Respectfully yours,
