I love this idea. Being able to document impact is critical and will tell a great story. Not an anecdotal one but actual data.

I think 15 minutes is too short. The change that PC makes on volunteers lives may not be as simple as finding out their job title. Multiple choice questions will help gather some data, but I think you should take advantage of the "connection" to gather some stories, written by the hand of the volunteer. I think most would be willing, maybe even eager, to tell a few.

Finding the right questions to ask to determine changes in thinking patterns, problem solving, resourcefulness, habits of mind, kindness/compassion, etc will be a challenge. And hard to measure.

Best of luck, can't wait to participate.
