Comment: 175,000 Washingtonians and 5,000 in my county will lose SNAP benefits if these changes are imposed and that is cruel, unnecessary and will particularly hurt children. I am not on SNAP but I care about less fortunate neighbors who need the benefits to eat. The Trump Administration and the GOP is coddling billionaires and corporations by cutting their taxes while victimizing the middle class and less fortunate by cutting benefits. 2020 cannot come soon enough to vote you out or proceed with past due impeachment proceedings. Do not impose these cruel changes, America is better than this terrible action. *🌐

Comment: New SNAP regulations will change the maximum income for eligibility in WA state for a single person earning between $16,237 and $24,980 or a four-person household earning between $33,475 and $51,500 annually. Comment: I am disabled and 60 years old. I don't have money in my budget for food. I draw 977 per m9nyh. I'm so thankful for that. But please if my food stamps change or anything else...i won't have money for food! I am so thankful for all the help I get as it's much needed. I live alone and no assets. Please leave my snap and all just as it is! My stomach doesn't work properly and I need certain foods. Please I need help. I depend on it. Thank you again for your help and this chance to tell you of my situation. I live in Georgia. *🌐

Comment: This is a mean-spirited rule that targets the poor. So many elderly and children rely on food stamps. I think that history will not be kind to the supporters of this measure and others like it. In terms of our nations budget, this is a drop in the bucket. Easy to fund. Why must our lawmakers continue to target the weakest among us in order to make themselves look strong? I cannot support this measure, as I do not support torturing seniors and starving children. Charity must not be treated as a four letter word! *🌐

Comment: There are so many people on SNAP and Medicaid, and unfortunately, this creates a way for them to be adjunct-eligible for so many programs in which they truly don't qualify. For example, when a person signs up for Medicaid, they only bring their income, not their spouses. They do not disclose that they live in a $200,000 home and drive a $50,000 car, but they just show that they, themselves, do not work. Medicaid and SNAP need to do a better job of actually determining what a family needs with PROOF. Whether that be a home visit, checking marriage license records, or actually taking it away when reported fraud occurs. It is so sad to see people who truly need benefits such as WIC and are turned away for being truthful, but those that lie about what they have are given so many free benefits that waste our tax dollars. SNAP also SHOULD NOT allow soda, candy, chips, etc. That defeats the entire point of food benefits... which is to provide nutrition to the needy. Needy. Not those that keep having kids so they don't have to work. *🇺🇸

Comment: I think the policy needs to be reviewed. I see so many individuals & families come through my lane and purchase a bunch of junk, unhealthy foods, soda, energy drinks, soda, candy and use their SNAP card. I just shake my head. I work hard, two jobs to support myself and my two teenagers. I am not sitting back looking for a payout. It is time people take responsibility. There are places in town that are hiring , get a job, do something responsible for your family and set s good example for your children. I understand this is not possible for everyone, however, a lot of people I see could be doing something other than taking advantage of the system. There should be more restrictions on what can be purchased with the SNAP card similar to WIC. If it is a government program, than the government should be able to regulate what is being purchased with the funds being handled to these folks. Sugary drinks and candy should not be allowed along with other junk food. This will only lead to more obesity in the country and more health issues which will drive health care costs up. It amazes me that these folks use their SNAP card for their so called groceries and then pull out cash or a debit card to buy tobacco products, probably the same debit card they used to get their names done and buy the brand new iPhone. I think you get my point- I see it first hand everyday I work; it is sad, the system is broken and needs to be fixed Thank you *🌐

I see so many individuals & families come through my lane and purchase a bunch of junk, unhealthy foods, soda, energy drinks, soda, candy and use their SNAP card. I just shake my head. I work hard, two jobs to support myself and my two teenagers. I am not sitting back looking for a payout. It is time people take responsibility. There are places in town that are hiring , get a job, do something responsible for your family and set s good example for your children. I understand this is not possible for everyone, however, a lot of people I see could be doing something other than taking advantage of the system. There should be more restrictions on what can be purchased with the SNAP card similar to WIC. If it is a government program, than the government should be able to regulate what is being purchased with the funds being handled to these folks. Sugary drinks and candy should not be allowed along with other junk food. This will only lead to more obesity in the country and more health issues which will drive health care costs up. It amazes me that these folks use their SNAP card for their so called groceries and then pull out cash or a debit card to buy tobacco products, probably the same debit card they used to get their names done and buy the brand new iPhone. I think you get my point- I see it first hand everyday I work; it is sad, the system is broken and needs to be fixed Thank you *

Comment: This program is completely bloated waste of taxpayer money. We need much stricter regulations, including drug testing to see who should be eligible to get free food with taxpayer money. From what I've seen about 85% of people on this program are able bodied young adults who are completely capable of feeding themselves but do not have to because they for some reason qualify for food stamps. I myself am a younger (32) year old adult and I see it everyday. Makes me sick how much money comes out of my paycheck each month and then see able bodied people capable of working who don't feel like it, and qualify for food stamps. WE NEED STRICTER REGULATIONS so that the people who actually need it can benefit from it more, and those who do not need it don't get it. *🌐

Comment: This is a needless regulation from the people who claim to be deregulatory zealots. States already conduct asset checks. Many people who were eligible before Welfare Reform are not. Granted, some people abuse the system but they are in the minority. The states are carrying out 100 percent of the administrative duties. We do not need duplication of duties. By the way, since the states are responsible for the entire program. Maybe we should be cutting the USDA's budget. I love the fact that these right wing hating government officials love those government jobs. *🌐

Comment: To me this should be considered campaign contribution for Democrats the way they pander for votes. I have been in hard time and good times. In hard times I had to make tough sacrifices. Now everyone feels they are entitled to new cars, phones, cable TV, things I never had as a child. I'm tired of seeing people on assisted living with snap, and a brand new BMW. I think this needs a complete overhaul of all rules. There was a small power outage and I lost my food. Those on snap got another payment that month. *🌐

Comment: Dear USDA, The president saying that people DONT need food assistance because unemployment is low, and the economy is doing great is a manipulation of the truth at best. Unemployment rate is not an accurate representation of the state of the countrys economy. It is the percentage of unemployed people Currently in the workforce. If it actually included everyone who wants a job it would be double. And furthermore, I can tell you as an educated person with years of experience in my field the economy Is Not Doing Great! I myself can barely make ends meet and would greatly appreciate food assistance for me and my family but I dont meet the requirements. Which brings me to my next point. USDA acting deputy undersecretary [Lipps] said something to the effect of automatic eligibility has expanded to allow millionaires to be eligible for SNAP. All I have to say to that is HA! if there are then Prove It! I am by no means a millionaire and as I stated before I am ineligible for food assistance and TANF per my income. The states do their due diligence. Food assistance money is NOT being wasted on those who are not in need. In fact, based on my experience and my difficulty putting food on the table for my family I say the government isnt doing enough. As for the supposed TANF loophole it does not exist. Again, there are minimum requirements for eligibility and if you are a person/family doing as great, in this amazing economy as the president says you are you will not qualify for TANF and therefore will not automatically qualify for SNAP. Having the ability to qualify for other assistance programs through qualification of one assistance program is not working the system. It allows for streamlining and efficiency that is all. Comment: PRO-LIFE supporters definitely need to oppose this cut. This proposed "change" would effect working families with children who are trying to get out of poverty. It would eliminate 3.1 million people who have an annual income of $32,640 for a family of 4! If a parent works an extra shift to try to get ahead, this proposed change would drop the family from the program. Food insecure children have higher rates of poor health, have higher rates of hospitalization, increased risk of asthma, and delays in cognitive developments. It is not enough to insist that babies be born: we need to make sure they have enough food, medical care, and ability to learn and thrive. *🌐

Comment: i have worked with low income families for 14 years. The one thing i have noticed is that as soon as they start working and receive their first paycheck, they are dropped from SNAP benefits. The program fails to recognize that one or two paychecks does not immediately get them out of the poverty situation. they may still be catching up on rent, etc and are short on funds for food. i would like to see SNAP create some sort of sliding scale to ease newly hired individuals off of benefits without cutting them off as soon as they start earning. There is no provision for single parents who may get sick once they have started working and have their newly earned paycheck fall below the limits, but still not be eligible for benefits, because of prior paycheck. many of these individuals get caught and end up quitting, because at least they can still feed their families with benefits. Often they have already exhausted their local resources and may only get limited Food Pantry assistance. The program needs to be carefully evaluated with some common sense guidelines to transition individuals into productive working members of our society without jeopardizing their progress by unflexible rules. *🌐

Comment: I believe that a change is needed. I have had a problem with the way the system is used and abused for years. This should be what it was intended to be Temporary Assistance. I work really hard to support my family and I watch people who work off the books or know their way around the system (loopholes) with extra cash flawnting it. Yes you can afford the extra because your rent gets paid with my taxes, yes you don't have to worry about the necessary groceries because that also comes from my tax money. Of course you can afford that new car ! This should be temporary for people who fall on hardtimes, loss of employment, loss of home, the elderly, our Veterans! *🌐

Comment: I heartily disagree with any changed in SNAP that will take food out of the mouths of people who really need it. As a urgent care physician at an inner city community health center I see people who are struggling to put food on their table every day. Many have to choose between getting medications or food. I do not believe there is abuse of this system. How can we put billions in the pockets of hugely wealthy people then take food out of the mouths of hte poor to cover the deficit created by that move? In a country were we used to believe that anyone could rise up out of poverty it now seems we instead punish those struggling at the bottom and allow those at the top to keep a boot on their necks. This is shameful. *🌐

Comment: Income levels are not necessarily a strong indicator as to sufficiency levels. Considering the raising cost of living in many areas, increased costs in expenses such as gas and utilities, and various factors that can not be calculated simply by looking at the income level of a family, I am against the proposed changes to the SNAP program. A blanket cut based on income level is directly harmful to the working poor whom the program is specifically tailored to support. Instead a program that would create a "submit and review" where a person within $10k a year of the proposed cut can provide documentation as to expenses and income to show that the discrepancy is under a predesigned percentage would be way more proper than a strict cut. Tiered levels of SNAP would be more appropriate. But simply saying "this income is too much" for such a low level of income to begin with is unrealistic and harmful. There should be a tier where benefits are ensured and then a tier $10k above that requires submission and review of income versus expenses with valid copies of bill statements that if they fall within a certain percentage of income to expense or ratio of such they receive a certain level of benefits still. This current proposed change I do not support. *🌐

Comment: The goal of SNAP is to alleviate hunger and malnutrition by allowing low-income individuals to purchase food items (FRAC, 2017). Research shows that SNAP plays a critical role in reducing the effects of poverty and food insecurity, and in improving dietary intake, and health, especially among Americas most vulnerable children (FRAC, 2017; National Research Council, 2013). Based off the Census Bureau data on poverty, 3.6 million people in the U.S. were raised above the poverty line in 2016, 1.5 million of them were children (Fox, 2017; FRAC, 2017). It should be noted that due to under-reporting of program participation in census surveys, these number estimates understate SNAPs anti-poverty effects (FRAC, 2017). Everyone has this stigma in their heads of individuals who receive food stamps are lazy and don't work hard. This is far from the truth. A lot of individuals on food stamps actually do work but do to their employer not paying live able wages they have to rely on food stamps to help them. A classic example of an employer doing this is Wal-Mart. As you can see SNAP has truly helped vulnerable individuals. Families already have to jump through so many loopholes to gain services which can be difficult to deal with when you're hungry or are trying to feed your hungry children. If anything we should be making this easier for families to access. We are one of the leading nations in the world yet we struggle with the idea of allowing everyone access to food. We need to stop this, it's okay to have equality. I have attached a policy analysis of SNAP I recently did in school if you're interested in reading. Respectfully, Brooke Calvin References Fox, L. (2017). The Supplemental Poverty Measure: 2016. U.S. Census Bureau. FRAC. (2017). Comment: I feel that SNAP programs are being taken advantage of in many states. While I have no issue in helping those in need, the program has some gaping holes. I have witnessed SNAP recipients buy Starbucks beverages using their SNAP benefits. Additionally, I once witnessed a man buy $100+ dollars worth of lobster tail using a SNAP card. People who are able to drive new escalades are not in true need of assistance. These occurrences happen daily. I have even seen grocery stores advertise their products, such as Starbucks, as a food stamp item. I also feel that we should have a way of assisting these families, so they can eliminate their need of food stamps. We should have budgeting classes, or other program opportunities to move families away from government dependence. I even feel that limiting the frequency of how often families get food stamps could be an option. I do not feel food stamps should be a guarantee at any time in a person's life. Furthermore, drug tests should be mandated for all food stamp recipients. Drug use should be an automatic disqualification for government assistance. *🌐

Comment: The proposed rule changes to the SNAP program here are harmful to millions of Americans who are currently receiving food stamps and people would need food stamps in the future, but not able to receive them because of these rule changes. (A large majority of those people are children, who have no other way of feeding themselves.) The economy may appear to be doing good if one solely relies on national numbers that don't actually show how real Americans are struggling. Many people are having to work 2 or more jobs just to put a roof over their heads. Taking away the small amount of money that they receive to buy food would be detrimental to not only their family's financial stability, but also their health. People will go starving because food is too expensive for them to buy. I have worked with many families whose parents haven't eaten in days as they are giving all the food they are able to afford to their children. I have worked with individuals who are disabled and unable to work, who only get $17 dollars in SNAP benefits because they make $737 a month in total income from social security. (The cutoff in my state is $730 a month for individuals). These kinds of things should not be happening in our country. We need to be making sure that every person in this country is taken care of and provided for. We honestly should be expanding the SNAP program, not trying to cut it down. I urge you to please reconsider going through with these rule changes. Thank you. *🌐

Comment: The changes are long over due for SNAP. So many people have abuse the system. Others like myself were honest, working, but couldn't afford to buy food after bills and were not qualified. It was so unfair. At 1 point I was over the limit by $3, I was unemployed and needed just a little help and working since I was 14 and could not get the help. Not to mention the lack of respect received at office when you apply. They act as if you're taking money from their pockets. Working people need help too, especially when you have other mouths to feed. Time to crack down on the offenders. *🌐

Comment: Good afternoon, I am writing in to let you how important it is to NOT close this so called loophole for a benefit like SNAP. As someone who has been on SNAP benefits and works with those who use benefits like SNAP, it is so important to understand the actual life decisions that are being made around those benefits. I have not met a single person who has the liberty to just not use their benefits. They are not choosing SNAP over using other income for food. They are not abusing the system. They are trying to make everything work with limited income, low wages, systematic oppression's holding them down. When they do start to make movement onward and upward they are bombarded with messages that they no longer fit into a narrow image of what needing help is. Kicking family and kids off benefits just when they cross a fictional line that the government has determined (even though most of our representatives have never been in that situation before) is cruel. It also creates a lack of motivation for more self-sufficiency. When the asset limit is enforced it discourages low-income families from saving, and it's a huge administrative burden trying to keep track of a recipient's bank account and other assets. The government should not be setting up more barriers for children and families. Making children enroll individually for free lunch is an unnecessary barrier children and their families will have to do. How could you possible think that a family who doesn't have the money to send a lunch with their children have time to fill out another form. How could you think that it is beneficial for a child to have to go through the process of claiming again that they dont have a home cooked lunch in front of their peers. These are more ways to oppress people in our country who are already dealing with more than any law maker can fathom. I urge Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue to go out and meet the people who are on the cusp and make the human connection to his proposed change. Our administration is too removed from the communities who are impacted by these policies and programs. *🇺🇸

Comment: I would like to urge the US Department of Agriculture to reconsider the cut to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program. There are many working families who rely on this assistance to ensure they can feed their families. Many of these families are hard working, but struggling to meet all of the basic needs of their families. Using their tax dollars to provide assistance is a worthwhile use of these funds. As a country, we should demonstrate our priorities with the programs we fund. And if we are funding our military at its highest levels, why shouldn't we also show our focus on families and their health. I hope this will be given highest consideration in the regulation process. *🌐

Comment: Please do not cut the SNAP resources for millions of people. The outliers are just that - outliers. The overwhelming majority require this support. The stats are clear - 50% of our health is determined by socioeconomic and environmental factors. 30% has to do with our individual choices and behaviors. 20% is healthcare. The upstream factors have to be solidly in place. Otherwise we end up using expensive healthcare options. And as healthcare continues to be squeezed, folks use ERs to get help with their urgent and chronic conditions. The least expensive way to help individuals and communities is through meeting the standards of care. Please, please, please do not go forward with this cut. Thank you. *🌐

Comment: Please do not enact these changes to the USDA SNAP program. Many hardworking Americans do not earn enough money to support feeding their families because the cost of housing, food and essential life necessities are too expensive. Seniors, such as me and many of my peers, cannot afford the insanely expensive medications our lives depend on. SNAP is essential to have enough food to survive. *🌐

Comment: If people are already getting government assistance, then they should be using that for their needs, like food water and housing. Most of the people getting assistance are taking advantage of the system. I pay taxes and rarely see a return. These people are milking the system instead of getting jobs to pay for food. I agree to limit the food stamps. *🌐

Comment: Cutting people off of nutrition is not the way to balance any budget. I can attest that our family was embarrassed to have to buy groceries with food stamps. My mother was a single head of household raising three children. However, we were grateful for our $35 a month about 50 years ago. None of us remained on public assistance past childhood. Please find another way to balance the budget. *🌐

Comment: As the gap between rich and poor grows wider and wider, this is the worst possible time to make things harder on the poor. It costs our tax payers $36 a year to support programs for those in hard times (predominantly women, children, seniors, and disabled) and over $800 a year for corporate bail outs. These numbers are from The Cato Institute (Koch brothers). This abhorrent plan needs to be trashed immediately on moral grounds. AND it is the job of our elected reps in Congress to make budget decisions such as this. The executive branch needs to back off! *🌐

Comment: I am writing to express concern about the proposed rule on changes to the SNAP program. According to Brandon Lipps, administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service for the United States Department of Agriculture, the proposed is predicted to make more than 3 million current recipients ineligible to continue receiving food assistance by limiting the rights of states to determine eligibility. According to Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue these changes would save money. As a country we should not be saving money by limiting food and nutrition for children. And, we should not be doing this by interfering with decisions by states as to which children in the state are eligible for SNAP benefits. The proposed change hurts children and families now. As explained in the statement of Urban Institutes Elaine Waxman to a subcommittee of the House of Representatives Agriculture Committee, the proposed change would force a parent to choose between a small raise that put her above the income limits or SNAP benefits that exceed the raise. Such decisions discourage abilities of families to increase their earnings and to move themselves up the economic ladder and put the nutrition and health of children at risk especially when free school lunches are lost. Hungry children dont learn as well and are less likely to succeed as adults. As a nation how can we take lunch and food from over a quarter million of our children? The proposed change has long term effects. Children who are hungry are sick more, miss more school, and do poorer in school. Because they are sick more their adult caregivers miss work keeping the family from improving their economic situation. In addition, children who do not thrive in school are less likely to succeed as working adults in reaching their economic potential reducing taxes they pay as adults they are also more likely to end up in the criminal justice system. Denying food to children results in less employment taxes and more criminal justice expenses. Stated another way: for the cost of a few lunches and some SNAP money the country and states will recognize long-term economic advantages by a better educated and, therefore, more fully employed workforce. *🌐

Comment: Please do not proceed with this proposed change to SNAP benefits. It will keep people in poverty and out of the labor market by discouraging them from getting higher-paying jobs or saving money at risk of losing access to SNAP. Also, the gross income limit doesn't take into account how expensive things like child care can be. *🌐

Comment: According to PBS.com, these new changes would through nearly 8% of beneficiaries off of food stamps. I would agree with the $9.3 billion saved according to the article and I am for squeezing loopholes shut in this program. I believe that the federal government was to save more money on other program role backs, our nation could follow through with other proposed ideas, including funding federal money into a program to allow more minorities to put a downpayment on a home, thus creating more property tax income for states, and thus allowing states to use the newly generated tax money to address infrastructure issues. While agree with saving money, I believe that if is unfair and unjust to throw almost 3 million Americans off of food stamps as defended by the poverty line. I believe that the most effective way to handle this issue and take more people off of food stamps is to help more people get higher paying jobs that pay a livable income of around $15 per hour. As a nation, if we were to address the income inequality crisis in our country, we would open new opportunities to be able to role back funding from programs and place that money in other programs. Overall, while I somewhat agree with the proposal, I believe that placing millions of Americans off of foot stamp benefits is an unjust decision at this time *🌐

Comment: According to PBS.com, these new changes would through nearly 8% of beneficiaries off of food stamps. I would agree with the $9.3 billion saved according to the article and I am for squeezing loopholes shut in this program. I believe that the federal government was to save more money on other program role backs, our nation could follow through with other proposed ideas, including funding federal money into a program to allow more minorities to put a downpayment on a home, thus creating more property tax income for states, and thus allowing states to use the newly generated tax money to address infrastructure issues. While agree with saving money, I believe that if is unfair and unjust to throw almost 3 million Americans off of food stamps as defended by the poverty line. I believe that the most effective way to handle this issue and take more people off of food stamps is to help more people get higher paying jobs that pay a livable income of around $15 per hour. As a nation, if we were to address the income inequality crisis in our country, we would open new opportunities to be able to role back funding from programs and place that money in other programs. Comment: To whom it may concern: It is my firm belief that we should help the neediest. No changes should be made to SNAP. States should continue to be able to use "broad-based categorical eligibility" to determine who needs aid. We are the wealthiest nation on the planet and should not take school lunch programs away from children. Again, no change should be made to SNAP. Sincerely, Kristin E. Olson *🌐

Comment: You need to consider families of single parents with children that have disabilities and the parent is unable to work. But due to a $70.00 increase on a disability check now at the amount of $770.00 the snap or food stamps are reduced to $170.00 a month. Every letter sent out by division of family services includes a monthly amount that if you make over that a month you have to report. Ours by snap guidelines being a family of 2 is $1,400 a month. Out of the SSI check rent is paid, phone bills, city transportation, clothing and food and vet bills for emotional therapy pets. This does not include and household cleaning items, cost to wash clothes. My family alone consist of myself and my disabled son at 14 and his and my emotional therapy pets both Dr recommended. There is no child support or other income coming into the house. So now due to the decrease if snap we will have no choice to use cash to buy food as well. This will NOT help families like mine get ahead but stuck in a rut that makes them feel hopeless. If we do not even come close to the monthly amount guidelines of $1,400 a month then why are our snap benefits being lowered? It's not easy for a type 2 diabetic to stay healthy and feed their child healthy meals also. And if it snap benefits are ever taken away my son will be removed from the free lunch program at school as well which will mean it will have to come out of what little bit of income we have. So do I make the choice to starve so my child has food? Evern though it's putting my health at risk because of my type 2 diabetes? Food pantries are only giving enough for 2 nights meals and you can only go to 1 every month which once again cost for transportation. Take money from prisons and put it into snap so families can continue to be fed!!! Tax payers dollars should be going back into the community by helping families in need, not criminals that chose to make a decision and receive 3 hot meals a day while some families are only having 1!!!!!! Where is the common sense in that? *🗣️

Comment: Its important that children are able to eat as well as their parent(s). To cut the supplemental Nutrition Assistant Program is cruel and inhumane. No child should go to bed hungry. Children need to be able to grow up strong and healthy. They need to be able go to school and learn about the world and if they are hungry, they will not. You need to fight back against these changes that would affect children who have nothing and live in poverty. This is not what our country should be doing. *🌐

Comment: I find the GOV's interest in reducing SNAP benefits unjustifiable. This becomes a burden on the most vulnerable and eventually a deeper burden to the taxpayer. *🌐

Comment: I am unalterably opposed to any changes in SNAP that reduces the amount of assistance that is given to people. SNAP comprises 2% of the federal budget which in and of itself is scandalous. There is no reason that anyone in this country should have to worry about having enough food for themselves and most importantly their children. Shame on this administration for trying to gut yet another safety net program. *🌐

Comment: Do not change the existing regulations regarding supplemental benefits for low income adults. It is unconscionable to believe you can give tax benefits to the top 1% and take food out of the mouths of children, the elderly and the poor. *🌐

Comment: Eliminate the purchase of junk food with snap. The only items that may be purchased must be on the WIC list. Make sure that repeat offender criminals are not eligible to receive SNAP until they have maintained a clean criminal record for at least five years. *🌐

Submitter Info

Comment: I am a healthcare provider that works with children population of Pittsburgh and other areas (including rural areas) of western Pennsylvania, in particular patients with diabetes on insulin therapy. I am concerned that the revision and changes planned for the SNAP are going to affect the families of the patient population I work with by: 1. Slowing down and therefore discouraging the application to the benefits. 2. Limiting their drive to increase their income due to the possibility of losing current benefits. 3. Families that lose benefits might increase food related expenses that will lead them to buy unhealthy cheaper food, affecting their diabetes control, increasing the chance for complications due to poor control and therefore increasing health care related expenses. Of note, patients with diabetes on insulin therapy require 3 meals and 2 snacks per day to administer the medication in a safer manner and achieve better control of the disease. *🌐
