Comment: There are so many people on SNAP and Medicaid, and unfortunately, this creates a way for them to be adjunct-eligible for so many programs in which they truly don't qualify. For example, when a person signs up for Medicaid, they only bring their income, not their spouses. They do not disclose that they live in a $200,000 home and drive a $50,000 car, but they just show that they, themselves, do not work. Medicaid and SNAP need to do a better job of actually determining what a family needs with PROOF. Whether that be a home visit, checking marriage license records, or actually taking it away when reported fraud occurs. It is so sad to see people who truly need benefits such as WIC and are turned away for being truthful, but those that lie about what they have are given so many free benefits that waste our tax dollars. SNAP also SHOULD NOT allow soda, candy, chips, etc. That defeats the entire point of food benefits... which is to provide nutrition to the needy. Needy. Not those that keep having kids so they don't have to work. *🇺🇸
